Ultimatum Despatched To Kaunas, Threatening Invasion

IF DEMANDS NOT MET

Polish Troops Are Reported Massing Near Lithuanian Frontier

By International News Service
International interest shifted today to Vilna, ancient Russian city, disputed between Poland and Lithuania since World War days, as Warsaw dispatched an ultimatum to Kaunas, allegedly threatening an armed invasion unless certain stern demands are met by Sunday morning.

Developments:
Warsaw—Polish troops were reported massing near the Lithuanian frontier to back up the ultimatum demand. Kaunas, Lithuania—Eretnists demanded determined resistance to the ultimatum, as government officials moved for international mediation and reports reached Kaunas that Soviet Russia will move if Poland attempts an armed invasion.

Berlin—Adolf Hitler completed preparations for an important address to the Reichstag which may dissolve that body.

Barcelona—A new series of raids killed at least 80 additional persons as insurgent troops continued their sweeping advances to the north.

Vienna—Nazi authorities continued their sweeping cleanups of Jewish and diffident elements and the country was regimented to enable all Austria to hear Hitler's speech.

HULMEVILLE

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Brown, Jr., at the private hospital of Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol, Saturday. The baby has been named Joanne. Mother and daughter are doing nicely.

The Rev. Charles H. Weller, pastor of Morrisville Methodist Church, was the Lenten service speaker in Neshaminy M. E. Church, last evening. His text from John 11:54, was: "Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with His Disciples."

The plan to landscape the front of the school grounds, here, was discussed at a meeting of Hulmeville-Middle-town Parent-Teacher Association in the school house, Wednesday evening. As soon as weather permits, it is hoped to have grass planted at the front of the plot and possibly shrubbery placed. An amendment to the Bucks County Council P. T. A. constitution, relative to dues, was spoken of, the local delegates and others at the council meeting in South Langhorne, April 9th, being privileged to vote on same. It was reported that the cafeteria is now paying its way, the pupils buying food, instead of making donations. Members who have not received utensils in which food was sent to the P. T. A. supper may secure same at the school. Mrs. Edwin M. Lathrop presided at this session.

URGES EMULATION OF IRELAND'S PATRON SAINT

Rev. Sullivan Asks Hearers To Drive Out The Insidious Enemies of Americanism

"IT CAN HAPPEN HERE"

We can all be true followers of St. Patrick by playing his part as in the legend and stamp out the insidious doctrines which infest this country. That was the message brought to those gathered last night to honor the Patron Saint of Ireland in connection with the weekly meeting of the Bristol Exchange Club.

It has become a custom for the Exchange Club, each year, to extend to Dr. George T. Fox, a member of the group, the privilege of conducting a St. Patrick's Night. The program is one eagerly anticipated and looked forward to with much interest.

Last night Dr. Fox arranged a most fitting program and one which will long linger in the memories of not only the Exchangeites, but the invited guests as well.

The weekly dinner of the service club was in keeping with the occasion, and following it the members adjourned to the social room in the Elks' Home. Here was given a program of songs, dances and pictures, all of an appropriate character.

Words of welcome to the guests were extended by Paul V. Forster, president of the club, and then there was group singing directed by Percy G. Ford, with Keith Rosser at the piano.

The speaker of the evening was the Rev. James J. Sullivan, formerly connected with St. Mark's Church, here, but now of St. Agnes Church, Philadelphia.

The address of the Rev. Sullivan did not deal so extensively with St. Patrick insofar as his biography is concerned, but more with the application of the legend of the Patron Saint of Ireland, insofar as it applies today to those conditions found in the world.

The speaker said: "St. Patrick is not only the Patron Saint of Ireland, but of the world. He is honored by all nations. He was not a native of Ireland, but was born on the coast of France. He must have been a man above the average to have so impressed himself upon the world."

Then the clergyman told how the tradition of St. Patrick related that he had driven all of the serpents out of Ireland. But this in the opinion of the speaker is a legend like the legend of George Washington.

It was at this point in his address that the speaker applied the legend of St. Patrick to present-day conditions. "Our own nation is infested with the serpents of Bolshevism, Nazism, and immorality," he said. "Oh, yes, you say it cannot happen here; but it has happened in Germany and in Russia. We can all become true followers of St. Patrick by playing his part as in the legend, and drive the insidious doctrines out of our country."

The Rev. Sullivan referred to magazines and the "movies" as the "tools of the serpents now at work" here in Bristol, in Pennsylvania and in America, to undermine our morals. "Put your foot down on them, as they are un-American and un-Christian. Do not think that it cannot and will not happen here."

Dr. Fox expressed his appreciation of the honor and privilege extended to him by his fellow Exchangeites in permitting him to arrange the program of the evening. He introduced Miss Sara Granzow, of the Granzow Dancing Academy. Miss Granzow had a group of one of her classes interpret an Irish Folk dance. The group comprised Elizabeth Lebo, Gloria Greco, Continued on Page Two

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY

Thirty-five members and friends of the Bucks County Jersey Cattle Club made their first tour as a "Jersey tour" on Tuesday, when they visited five farms in Burlington and Camden counties in New Jersey.

The tour was under the direction of Charles Thompson, County Agent of Burlington county. Warren C. F. Randolph, Silverdale, president, and Jerome H. Taylor, secretary, of the Bucks Jersey club, announced that they are planning another dairy tour in the near future through the northern section of New Jersey. County Agent William F. Greenawalt was a member of the tour.

Chief of Police Albert Cooper, of Morrisville, and his force are making an effort to halt the series of breaking and entering cases in stores of that borough. The burglaries are believed to have been done by boys.

During the past four days four business places on Bridge street were broken into. Nothing was taken but small change. The same manner of entrance was used in each place, that of breaking a window and then opening the latch.

First, the store of Robert Beidelman was entered, and then the restaurant of J. Milnor Wildman. On the third night the restaurant of Jacob Nathan and the Robert Morris Hotel were broken into.

BEAUTIES OF ROCKY MTS. TOLD SOCIETY MEMBERS

Daniel MacGowan, of Banff, Canada, Shows 200 Colored Slides at Trevoze

HORTICULTURAL GROUP

TREVOZE, Mar. 18—The Rocky Mountains and their beauties were told of by Daniel MacGowan, of Banff, Canada, when he visited the Trevoze Horticultural Society, Tuesday evening.

The program was enjoyed by the largest crowd in the history of the society, the number being 400 to 500 people.

In order to give the guest speaker as much time as possible, the business session, which was in charge of Robert B. McKenney, Newtown, one of the vice-presidents, was curtailed.

Illustrating his lecture with at least 200 beautifully colored lantern slides, Mr. MacGowan gave a talk on the Canadian Rockies. The pictures showed the wild flowers and animal life in the Rockies. In addition to describing the animals and flowers, Mr. MacGowan also told of many of the trips he has taken through the mountains.

Included among those in attendance were persons from Oregon, Missouri and Connecticut, and during the evening gifts were given to these persons by J. V. Hare, Mrs. MacGowan also received one.

Reports of various committees were presented during the business session, and Mr. McKenney brought with him a very rare plant in this section, the camelie japonica, which is grown extensively in the South. The plant which Mr. McKenney exhibited is about 30 inches tall, but in the South they grow to be quite large.

The next meeting of the society will take place on Tuesday evening, April 19th.

Plan No Appeal

Harrisburg, Mar. 18—So far as the Justice Department was concerned today, there will be no Commonwealth appeal from the Dauphin County Court decisions, holding the senatorial and legislative reapportionment acts unconstitutional.

"Inasmuch as candidates have until March 28 to file nominating petitions," Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti declared, "it is proper that the citizens of Pennsylvania know that no appeal will be taken and that we will proceed under the whole apportionment."

80 Gather in The Doylestown Country Club for Delightful Function

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 18—A get-together banquet, conducted for Junior Women's Clubs of Bucks County, was participated in by 80 young women, Tuesday evening. The affair took place at Doylestown Country Club, with clubs represented including: New Hope, Newtown, Warrington, Southampton, Langhorne, Chalfont, Doylestown.

A welcome was extended by Mrs. Calvin S. Boyer, president of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Boyer expressing the hope that such affairs will lead to closer relationship between the junior clubs of the county, which total nine.

During the dinner the group joined in singing, led by Mrs. William Gwiner, with Miss Marie Barton at the piano.

Miss Priscilla Swartley, who is the first recipient of a scholarship maintained by the Bucks County Junior Clubs, known as the Catherine Shell Crumrine Loan scholarship, expressed her gratitude in being able to graduate from Cedar Crest College this June as a result of the scholarship. Miss Ruth Sober, co-chairman of scholarship, read by-laws which representatives of the junior clubs had just completed pertaining to future seekers of the scholarship. Embodied in these laws was the importance of having the scholarship rotate each time to a different club. The scholarship will be available this Spring and all applications must be made through a Bucks county junior women's club not later than April 1st.

Mrs. Horace Watson, Newtown, co-chairman of organization, presided over the section of the program which dealt with the activities of the clubs and called on the various club presidents to explain the methods of raising money within their clubs.

Three visitors from outside the county added a great deal to the meeting. Mr. R. J. Robinson, junior representative of the Delaware County Board, who was introduced by Mrs. Harry Briggs, president of the Doylestown Juniors, spoke briefly on the importance of the juniors joining the general federation and also of having a strong junior county federation set-up.

Mrs. Thomas Hoffman, a Germantown club member, who is interested in the Philadelphia Motion Picture Forum, told how the motion picture affects fashion.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Just Too Brilliant

Washington, March 17. THE GREASY apologies of his young press agents do not disguise the significance of the sudden collapse of the New York gubernatorial candidacy of Mr. Robert H. Jackson, now Solicitor General and a close friend of the President.

THE IMPORTANCE of his announced withdrawal lies not in the fact that he has made a somewhat silly spectacle of himself, because, except for his link with the White House, there is no great weight to Mr. Jackson, and the persistent ballyhoo about his brilliancy had become funny. In fact, it was one of the things that contributed to his flop. In politics it is easy to over-advertise, and brilliancy isn't exactly the word to carry a candidate far.

RATHER, the importance of the collapse is that with the personal support of the President of the United States he was unable to make the grade. That reflects not so much upon Mr. Jackson as upon

Declare 44-Hour Law Unconstitutional

Harrisburg, Mar. 18—A decree declaring Pennsylvania's 44-hour week law unconstitutional and making permanent a preliminary injunction already granted, was handed down in Dauphin County Court today. Judge W. C. Sheely, of Adams County, handed down the ruling with the explanation his order was entered "at this time in order that an immediate appeal to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania may be taken and the preparations of the paper books expedited."

Not To Consider Statement

Philadelphia, Mar. 18—A jury in U. S. District Court was admonished today by Federal Judge Albert B. Maris, not to permit the statements of Russell McCurdy, of Bristol, one of the alleged 91 defendants in the $20,000,000 post-appeal bootleg conspiracy, to influence them in reaching their verdict.

Judge Maris referred to McCurdy's accusation that Gus Avella, his former employer, and a defendant, had offered him $100 to "keep his mouth shut." McCurdy disregarded the offer and turned state's evidence instead.

The jurist also pointed out to the jurors as the trial went into the fourth day, that Avella has pleaded no contest—no defense. Leon Flood, a Philadelphia Negro, testified that he was employed as a truck driver by Benjamin R. Fogel, a defendant, pictured as one of the principal distributors of the ring which allegedly operated in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and New York.

Flood identified Fogel, Harry Staub, Joseph Goldman, Fred Burns and George Goodman, all defendants, as visitors to the garage from which shipments were made in South Philadelphia in 1935. He described the place as "Staub's garage" and termed Staub as the most frequent visitor. He told in detail of shipments made from the garage.

William S. Riley, commander of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, died in Abington Hospital, yesterday afternoon of a cerebral hemorrhage, he having been ill but four days. The deceased was the husband of Miriam Brumfield Riley.

Having served in the United States Army for the duration of the World War, Mr. Riley was most active in affairs of the Bracken Post and of the Bucks Volture, No. 929, 40 'n' 8 Society. TELLS OF WORK WITH YOUTHS AND ITS SUCCESS

Bristol Rotarians Hear Story of Boys' Haven at Allentown

TWO SPEAKERS PRESENT

Project Has Done Much To Rehabilitate the Youth of Section of Allentown

Rehabilitation of youth which has gone wayward and the safeguarding of youth from the pitfalls of idleness and friendlessness was the topic told with eloquent emphasis yesterday afternoon to the Bristol Rotarians.

Two speakers, one a former newspaperman, and the other a business man, both residents of Allentown, gripped their audience with a story of human interest gained at first hand by their work among the youths in the city of their residence. The story told in two parts, when linked together, gave a comprehensive summary of what "Boys Haven" has done in Allentown in reclaiming those who were headed down the ladder of morals and in making it easier for them to ascend and reach a higher elevation in the social order.

The Rotarians and Rotary Anns, with a few invited guests, enjoyed the weekly dinner-meeting in the dining hall of the Presbyterian Church. The menu, songs and entertainment numbers were in keeping with Saint Patrick. Rotarians not wearing green ties or having some semblance of green upon them were each fined 25 cents, while one bold member of the service club wearing an orange colored tie surrendered a dollar beneath the menacing shillelagh held above his head. Green carnations were presented to the Rotary-Anns.

A male quartette, composed of the Rev. James R. Galley, Leslie Helwig, Otto Grupp and Ernest Gamble gave selections which were well applauded.

Frank Voit, president, presided, and after extending greetings to those in attendance, presented Dr. J. Fred Wagner, as the chairman for the balance of the meeting.

Introducing E. T. Satchell, president and chairman of the Board of Trustees of "Boys Haven," Dr. Wagner told of a recent visit he and Mr. Voit had made to that community center. Dr. Wagner also told of the origin of the community center idea in Bristol, when he, Mr. Voit, and some others had learned that four youths of tender age in Bristol had recently committed crimes for which they had to face trial at court.

Mr. Satchell said: "Boys Haven," of Allentown, came into being November 15, 1934. The original building was leased in the neighborhood where the need was greatest.

"County and police court records glare out with the indisputable fact that during the twelve months immediately preceding the opening of 'Boys Haven'—five boys in that territory, between the ages of 14 and 18, were involved in the most serious charge in the entire category of crime—Murder; 77 other boys had been to various institutions of correction; and there was an average of 12 police calls a day from a section of the community where there was a general defiance of law and order.

"Today, almost three years later, there is a different picture. Police calls, which may well be taken as a barometer of behavior, are rare. Present records indicate that in these three years only five boys have been involved in difficulties that warranted prosecution, and a total of only 13 have played their way into trouble of a minor nature.

"Boys Haven" was not founded solely to keep boys out of mischief. It germinated from an idea to provide guidance and supervised recreation, to mould constructive habits and generally to help under-privileged boys to grow into useful and respected citizens."

Mr. Satchell, an Allentown business man, talked from a personal experience and having this for emphasis, held his audience with little or no effort.

"If you don't want to give lots of your time don't become interested in juvenile work; because it grips you, and holds you," said the speaker.

He described a section of Allentown populated by those, either of foreign birth or off-springs of such, representing 21 nationalities; those who had little or no home training; a section from which 92 cases annually got into the courts from an area of about three-quarters of a mile square, where five youths were tried on the charge of murder; and a territory inhabited by gangs of youths which held no regard for law nor fear of it; where police cars were burned, police feared to patrol singly, was the picture given by the speaker.

"Bob Rhedans was struck by these conditions and he went out and organized Boys Haven," said the speaker. "He had neither money nor tools and he did not use force but love."

Then, according to the speaker, Rhe-

PHILATELISTS' PARADISE

Postmaster General Farley has announced President Roosevelt's tentative approval of a series of 31 new postage stamps to replace, during the next year, stamps now in use.

The new series will include stamps bearing the portraits of all American Presidents, except the two now living, Herbert Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt, himself. It is interesting to note that the most expensive stamp, the $5 one, will bear the image of that firm exponent of economy, Calvin Coolidge. The likeness of another great advocate of frugality, Benjamin Franklin, will continue to adorn a stamp—but a one-half cent stamp, not the one-center which long has displayed Benjamin's benevolent countenance.

George Washington who now is portrayed on two of the most commonly used stamps—full-face on the three-cent, profile on the two-cent—will appear hereafter on only one stamp, the one-cent denomination. This is not a reduction in rank, however, as the Presidents will appear in order of service beginning with Washington at one cent and ending with Coolidge at $5. Possibly to make up for having George Washington on only one stamp, Martha Washington's picture will decorate the one and one-half stamp, between her husband and John Adams.

Adams, whose portrait never previously has appeared on a postage stamp, will make his debut on one of the most widely used denominations—the two-center. Jefferson, to whom the present Administration pays lip service, will adorn the three-cent stamp now dedicated to Washington. Jackson, the New Dealer's pet hero (next to Franklin Roosevelt) will appear on the less commonly used six-cent stamp. And so it goes.

There also will be stamps depicting the Statue of Liberty, an American Indian, Golden Gate, Niagara Falls, a buffalo, the amphitheater at Arlington National Cemetery, the Lincoln Memorial, the United States Capitol, and the Goddess of Freedom.

In view of some of the mean things said by unappreciative citizens a few years ago, we don't suppose Jim Farley's stamp-collecting friends will be permitted too big a field day when the new stamps come out. But when the Roosevelt Administration shall have passed into history, it ought to be held in grateful memory by at least one group of citizens—the philatelists.

No confirmation has been received from the White House, to the report that the President will publish a book entitled How to Make Enemies and Antagonize Industry.

It seems to have remained for this nation to lend its stamp of approval to the international arms race as "the manly art of self-defense."

Octavian Goga wasn't premier of Rumania long, but long enough to have found jobs for 25,000 of his countrymen.

A split in Democratic ranks was inevitable. You can't expect that many Americans to stay agreed about anything.

Alice Sperling, Ruth Bailey, Norma Kerr and Arlene Reynolds. Their performance was outstanding and elicited much applause.

Moving pictures showing scenes in Ireland, loaned through the courtesy of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, were shown by Clarence Winter. Dr. Fox briefly described numerous of the scenes depicted and related some personal experiences as he had travelled through that section of the country.

Junior Club-Women Of Bucks Have A Banquet

Another Germantown club member, Mrs. F. C. VanDusen, who is vice-chairman of fine arts, exhibited a fascinating display of puppets, which belonged to the east of "Jack and the Bean Stalk" and were constructed by the Germantown girls.

"All children," she said, "love our shows, but there is one thing that we have to be very careful about; our stories must run true to form, as the children are very keen in noticing any variance of the script from the plots of the stories which they have learned by heart." The puppets were displayed as an inducement for Bucks county juniors to exhibit puppets made by the girls at the annual convention to be held in Pittsburgh next May.

The program was brought to a most pleasant climax when Mrs. Boyer introduced the feature of the evening, Dorothy Waldo Phillips, widely known for her readings and character studies. She enthralled her audience with her delightful personality, as though through a kaleidoscope she showed them childhood, laughter and realism. Starting with poems taken from the books written for children by Elizabeth Boyd Berle and Corn Millay, she gave vivid flashes of childish imagination and simplicity. She pleaded that grownups try to recapture the gift of imagination which most of them have lost and gave as an example the bored expression of an adult riding on a subway and the interest shown by a child.

Dressed in a huge feathered hat and flaunting a parasol, she did as her first character study, Ruth Draper's "English Lady in a Bazaar." Then, after keeping her audience "in stitches," she threw a big shawl over her head and did another of Ruth Draper's sketches, "Three Generations in a Court Room," first portraying a poor 75-year-old Polish grandmother, then the mother and finally the daughter. A Cockney story called "Albert and the Lion" delighted the girls with its absurdity. Mrs. Phillips brought her presentations to a close by temporarily acting as "A Small Town Club Woman Pinch-Hitting as the Treasurer."

CUTS FUEL COST

Interesting tests by food experts show that cooking in aluminum is economical, because this superior conductor seizes heat and stores it up. Aluminum is pronounced a heat conductor three times more efficient than other materials commonly used for cooking utensils. That is why aluminum cooks just as fast with the flame turned down; why aluminum-baked cakes are such a beautiful, all-over brown; why roasts retain their savory juices and why chicken fries to a tender crispness in conveniently-styled aluminum utensils.

he wanted to be Governor. At once a vigorous campaign, more or less White House directed, was launched. The brilliant ballyhoo got under way and a strong publicity buildup for the President's choice was started. Mr. Thomas Corcoran (Tommy the Cork), with other brilliant members of the inner circle, arranged a great testimonial banquet in New York for the candidate. All sorts of Administration pressure was applied and Mr. Roosevelt personally lent a hand toward making it a success.

THE candidate was eulogized as "brilliant." He responded with great breast-beating vigor and was hailed by the faithful as the next Governor of the State. In the Senate and elsewhere he was mentioned in connection with the Presidential nomination, it being clear that if elected Governor in 1938, with the President's backing, he would be in most advantageous position for 1940. At this stage, Mr. Jackson was literally covered with bee stings and his press agents let it be known that the gubernatorial nomination was a "push-over." They began to write plying stories about poor Mr. Farley, as having been put "in the dog house" by the brilliant young left wingers of the White House group.

ALL THIS time Mr. Farley had said nothing publicly. He studiously avoided having his picture taken with Mr. Jackson; he did not attend the banquet and he made no secret to his friends of his belief that Mr. Jackson would not get far as a candidate. That this unfavorable attitude conflicted with the President's desire appeared to make no difference to Mr. Farley, which seemed to some the most significant thing of all. A few days ago when, in a period of relative calm, the situation was surveyed the more clear-headed o.

the Jackson managers discovered three things. First, that the New York Democratic machine is Mr. Farley's machine and not Mr. Roosevelt's. Second, that Mr. Farley had no idea of falling into line for Mr. Roosevelt's candidate. Third, that without Mr. Farley there wasn't a chance for Mr. Jackson.

WHEN THESE pregnant facts seeped into the minds of the managers, there was nothing to do but quit—and quit they did with great suddenness and considerable unconscious humor. The inspired journalistic spokesmen announced—first, that this "brilliant, able and sincere" young man now realized he could not get the nomination because of the wicked machine politicians; second, that he never wanted to be Governor anyhow; third, that his withdrawal was due to fear that the nomination might be forced on him—all three very novel notions, indeed. How these brilliant young men reconcile these slightly conflicting statements is not disclosed but it is safe to say that no one thought them more comic than Mr. Farley. He fairly shook the dog house. He had a right to. When they told Mr. Farley that Mr. Jackson was out, Mr. Farley is reported to have said, "He never was in."

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

Amusing situations, good comedy and a quartet of attractively staged musical numbers (backed by some ultra smart dancing) are the highlights of "Thanks For Listening," Pinky Tomlin's newest starring vehicle, which opens at the Bristol Theatre today. Made from a story by John Clymer, and directed by Marshall Neilan, it has just enough plot to string together a series of entertaining action situations, with the young hero finding his too-ready sympathy with the troubles of anyone interfering materially with his ambitions to convince a pretty manicurist in a Reno hotel that marriage would make a better career for her.

A quartet of sharpsters, headed by a clever woman, capitalizes on this trait of his, by setting him up as a "professional listener," with the idea of turning his information into easy money for themselves. How he foils their idea to rob an eccentric miner of his "hidden mine" supplies most of the action.

Musically, the hit is Tomlin's own very popular song, "The Love Bug Will Bite You," which is backed by "I Like to Make Music," "Thanks For Listening" and "In the Name of Love."

GRAND

Millions of radio fans who listen in on the "Hollywood Hotel" air show undoubtedly imagine it is broadcast from an actual hotel of that name, magnificent beyond anything else ever conceived. In fact there is little guesswork about that, for many citizens of the cinema capital have had tourists approach them on Hollywood Boulevard and ask directions to the hotel.

Warner Bros. must have had something of the sort in mind when they started producing a spectacular film musical of the same name as the air show out at their studio. And in stage settings for the production they set out to give the fans a concrete visualization of the hotel of their dreams. Investigating rumors of colossal spending, this correspondent visited the Orchid Room set. Now we've seen hotels, but—they've got something there!

"Hollywood Hotel," which stars Dick Powell, opened yesterday at the Grand Theatre. In the cast are such notables as Rosemary and Lola Lane, Hugh Herbert, Ted Healy, and the famed writer and radio impresario Louella Parsons. Then also there are Benny Goodman's famous Swing Band and Raymond Paige's Orchestra.

When small daughter stages a sit-down strike, or just an emphatic argument for having her room done over, House Beautiful advises parental co-operation. The one condition is that she must plan her room on paper first, bringing her vague notions down to earth.

Give her a budget, no matter how small, and let her plan her purchases within it. Suggest that she bring home samples, just like a grown-up and try them in her room for color and pattern. Let her use originality, but teach her tactfully to employ good taste as well.

Kiss Kills Shark

"Kiss of death"

One of the strangest phenomena of nature was reported by the Rev. A. J. Laplante, Catholic missionary among the Fiji islands for the past 10 years, when he returned with pictures of native life. One of the peculiar customs consists of herding small sharks into huge nets, picking them up by the tail, and kissing them on the stomach, after which they lapse into a coma and show no signs of life.

BRISTOL BOYS' CLUB TO PLACE TEAM IN FIELD

The Bristol Boys' Club is a new organization starting out for the 1938 baseball season.

This club is being managed by Joseph Avella, whose assistant is Nick Palumbo.

"We are trying to put out a baseball team that will come in close quarters with the faster leagues of this town. This team is composed of boys 17 years of age and under. We have such outstanding players as Anthony Palumbo, last year's star of the American Legion. Other stars are Alfred Fioravanti and James Penners, star second baseman, who ranked close in batting average with Anthony Palumbo, whose average was .400. Other players who are interested in this club will please report at the field next to the railroad station on Saturday, at 2 p. m. We have quite a few members, and would like to have more," says the manager.

dans rented an old storeroom and the first year made great progress. "It is the only club of its kind in existence, so far as we know," stated Satchell.

"The Boys Haven is governed by a senate and house of representatives. The former is composed of the older youths, while the latter is made up of the younger element. We have two patrols—one a truant and one a police patrol.

"When a youth is sent to a reformatory he learns much that is to his detriment, but when he comes out we meet him at the Boys Haven and welcome him. We have gotten jobs for 17 such and so far we have had no delinquencies. You must make boys want to be good and to grow up into good and worthwhile citizens."

The boys who go to Boys' Haven make their own rules and they have "honesty, integrity and kindness" instilled into them.

Games are provided and their mental and physical needs and requirements are catered to. "They are now well behaved and properly in that section is safe."

Satchell told his audience that some older men taught the boys before the establishment of Boys Haven how to cover up their paths of wrong doing, and acted as fences for the disposal of things which they stole. So this group was given consideration. These were handled in rather an unique way in providing them with money providing they would leave the boys alone.

"The Haven is a place where boys can play and not get into trouble."

"The boys pay nothing but must earn benefits by doing things about the place. They pay nothing for the use of the swimming pool, use of pool table, use of 6000 books, or instruction in art, chemicals and electrical experiments."

"The Boys Haven is supported by good-will subscriptions."

"Just so long as this country permits babies to be born it is up to honest and right-thinking citizens to see that they are given a decent chance."

"If you have the youth, for God's sake protect it. Don't let it play itself into mischief."

"Bob" Rhedans, the next speaker, director of Boys Haven and its founder, is a former newspaperman. He was shocked one day as he stood in court when two youths, 14 years of age, stood before the court to answer the charge of murder. Upon obtaining permission from the sitting judge, Rhedans talked with the boys. He told the story of how the two youths charged with murder came into their predicament by meeting with a man who gave them $5 each, after they had been punished by their parents for staying out late at night. The two recipients of the money ventured out that night on a career of crime and ended in court on the serious charge of murder. He immediately gave up his position and went down beneath the Tilghman bridge and met the toughest gang in Allentown. He talked with them, gained their confidence and this led to the establishment of Boys Haven.

The speaker told how:

"Our first concern was the matter of securing a suitable building to house this new enterprise. Percy B. Ruhe, editor of the Allentown Morning Call, and I began the search. I had $47 of my own and $3 the judge had given me. We found a vacant storeroom at 642 North Front street which just suited our purpose. It was the property of Mrs. Hannah Silberstein, the widow of Morris Silberstein, for thirty years a prominent merchant in that part of the city."

"It took a little persuasion to convince Mrs. Silberstein that the boys who were to form the club would be restricted to orderly conduct, but soon she consented to an arrangement whereby we were to take over the property under lease."

"On the night of the opening of the original Boys Haven building at 642 North Front street, when much work remained to be done to put it into condition for use as a recreation hall, I hung my overcoat on a hook so that I could mingle more freely with the boys and help them in their work. More than 300 boys were in one room at the time."

"As closing time neared, I went to the hook to get the coat. It was missing. I realized that if I didn't watch my step something might happen to mar the occasion and perhaps mean the end of my planning. However, I had worked with boys before and I felt that a little psychology and diplomacy were in order."

"First, I went over to the door and locked it. Then I turned around and said to the boys:

"Somebody in this room 'borrowed' my overcoat. Possibly you do not understand the purpose back of my desire to open this club. But I'll make a bargain with you."

"By that time I had the whole crowd staring at me, wondering what was going to happen."

"If a big guy took my coat in order to kid me tonight and he has the nerve to admit it, I went on, 'I'll go to work with him here on the floor. And if it was some youngster, I intend to give him the worst spanking he ever got.'"

"At that, a 15-year-old boy came up to me and asked why I didn't call the cops. He said he was sure they would get the coat for me."

"I'm not going to report this matter to the police," I returned. "I'm going to handle it in my own way."

"That was all he wanted to know. As soon as he was assured it was a matter between the offender and me, he turned around, bent over and invited me to go to work with the spanking."

"But the story doesn't end there. This young fellow realized he had done something radically wrong. He was willing to take the consequences himself—at what a cost he knew only too well—but when it came to squealing on four other boys who were involved with him—well, that was another question."

"This was supposed to be a party 'on the up and up,' in the parlance of the street. The boys were expected to act like gentlemen and they knew it. An experiment was being made and if they proved themselves worthy of the trust that was being placed in them they would benefit by the good times that were in store for them. And if one of their number was discovered failing by the wayside so soon it meant he would be ostracized from the fellowship of his companions. That would have been severe punishment, and he was not going to let it happen to his buddies if he could prevent it."

"The boy hit upon an ingenious plan which actually worked out satisfactorily. To divert suspicion from the quintet, he arranged for the coat to be found the following day in an automobile. And that's the way the coat was returned to me."

Rhedans told of accompanying the gang on "parties" and by making himself one of them and impressing them with the fact that he was on the "up and up," gained their confidence and in this way salvaged them. They were taught new things in life and today the Boys Haven is doing a work of inestimable value."
